Programme Highlight	Vigorous development in Hong Kong and the neighboring Great Bay Area (GBA) has resulted in a massive amount of construction waste material (CWM). The excessive CWM not only poses challenges to land scarcity, but it also raises safety and environmental concerns. How to productively and efficiently use these waste will be huge challenges in the GBA. The guest speaker has teamed up with professors and experts in the GBA and proposed to set up a Waste Trade Organization (WTO) covering 11 cities in the region, in order to trade and share CWM towards achieving zero waste status in the long term. In this seminar, the guest speaker will discuss prospects and challenges for construction waste management in the GBA from the perspective of construction professionals. Furthermore, developing a WTO as a cumulated form of primary countermeasures will be discoursed to provide some inspiration for the construction industry in response to the looming construction waste crisis.

About the Speaker

Dr Wilson W.S. Lu; Associate Professor, Department of Real Estate and Construction; Associate Dean (Research), Faculty of Architecture, The University of Hong Kong

Dr. Lu is a leading authority in construction waste management research. He has been studying the issue for over a decade and conducted countless interviews with government officials and industry practitioners across the Great Bay Area. His previous research included construction waste management in Hong Kong and Mainland China with a focus on its managerial, economic, and policy facets, including tracing illegal dumping using big data.

Dr Lu has been awarded the Strategic Public Policy Research (SPPR) Funding scheme for 2018/19 through his joint university research project entitled “Boosting Construction Waste Material Sharing in the Guangdong-Hong Kong-Macao Bay Area”. This project also includes other professors and experts from Hong Kong Polytechnic University, Shenzhen University, Sun Yet-sen University, and Guangzhou University.
